

Sure. Every real estate professional does. If you're like most, you are an expert in finding good properties and negotiating a profitable sales contract; but you're probably not an expert in tenant screening, lease writing and rent collection. Fortunately, you don't have to be. Add a NARPM® member to your team so you can focus on what you do best—selling more homes! Most NARPM® members do not sell property; they only manage and lease. This means they are truly your partner and not your competitor. Plus, they have established relationships with other investors and tenants, so they can also be a great source of buyer and seller referrals to you. NARPM® members know how to keep your clients happy—which keeps you happy too.
